

CURRICULUM VITAE

DONALD VON DOHLEN, JR.

8/29/10

My education and experience have focused on teaching history and social studies at the college and secondary levels. I have taught government, economics, psychology, sociology, geography, world history, and US history at the high school level. I have taught US history at the college level. I have also written and edited school curriculum at various levels for American students and also for a Zambian curriculum. I have taught Biblical studies and theology as well as English (esp. literature). I have also been a headmaster and an academic dean (high school level).

Education

BA in economics from Texas A&M University, 1966

Th. M. in New Testament Literature and Exegesis from Dallas Theological Seminary in 1971.

MA in history with an emphasis on European and medieval history from the University of Texas at Arlington, 1990.

Experience

August, 2007, until now—social studies and history teacher at Houston Learning Academy in Humble, TX. I have been teaching a variety of social studies subjects to high school students. This school meets the needs of students who need to catch up academically or who have other problems. (Supervisor: Mrs. Howard, 281-852-2022).

January, 1995, through the current year—adjunct instructor in history at Houston Community College, the Northeast College. I have been teaching US History 1301-1302 each semester since this time and am currently doing so. I usually teach two or three classes. I have taught as many as four in one semester. (Supervisor: Dr. Aaron Knight, 713-718-8501).

August, 1998-July 2006—head of history and social studies department at Harvest Christian Academy. I taught most of the high school courses and supervised the other teachers in junior high school courses in social studies. I also worked with competitive academic competitions, taught Bible classes, and monitored the lunch room and so forth. The school was absorbed by another school, and my position ceased to exist. (Supervisor: Mrs. Patricia Gerhet)
