For all CPA candidates taking courses at Houston Community College
Board Rule 511.57

To paraphrase the section, a student who wants to take any of the board-approved accounting courses must first have a bachelor’s degree from an accredited 4-year institution; then the student can enroll and take as many of the board-approved accounting courses as he/she chooses. A student who is pursuing a bachelor’s degree in accounting or any other discipline should not take accounting courses from a community college until the degree is conferred.

After obtaining the degree, a student may enroll in one 3-hour course or all 30-semester hours in accounting at a board-approved community college. Students do not have to complete the accounting courses from one board-approved community college. It is acceptable to take the courses from more than one of the four community colleges that are recognized by the Board.

The ethics course is a separate requirement and will not be counted in the 30-hours of accounting. To be eligible to take the exam, an applicant must have completed the following:

Bachelor’s degree from an accredited university;
150 semester hours of college credit;
30 semester hours of upper-division accounting courses;
24 semester hours of upper-division related business courses; and,
3 semester hour board-approved ethics course.
